DOCTORAL DISSERTATION ABSTRACT

In Autobiographie, Roman, Autofiction, I examine the question of fiction in autobiographical texts. Introducing “autofiction” as a field of study, I explore both its diachronic and synchronic dimensions. Starting from its literary and theoretical origins, I underline the distinctive aspects of autofiction through its relations with a wide range of autobiographical genres. The problems uncovered are addressed by considering how information (fact↔fiction axis) is processed (author↔reader axis) in the light of Philippe Lejeune’s autobiographical pact (1975). Having decoded autofiction as a progressive poetization of the self, I expose its psychoanalytical roots, with special consideration of Serge Doubrovsky’s Fils (1977). Building on these successive discoveries, I conclude with a formal definition of autofiction as a literary genre.

Dissertation defended on January 10th 2005 at New York University in Paris before a jury composed of Jacques Lecarme (Paris III-La Sorbonne nouvelle, president of the jury), Pierre Glaudes (Toulouse II-Le Mirail, thesis director), Eugène Nicole (New York University, thesis director), Serge Doubrovsky (NYU, reader) and Patrick Marot (Toulouse II, reader).
